

Servant Leadership is cornerstone upon which any high performing teams must rest. In as little as two weeks any team can adopt agile practices. It however takes a lifetime to manage high performing teams.

Servant Leadership has been around since the early 70's and is now taking center stage with a much needed and sought-after approach to increase the performance of autonomous teams. Teams however can never completely become autonomous without servant leadership.

Today many organizations are struggling with the concept of servant leadership for one reason; TRUST. It's a big leap for many to trust that teams are willing to get the work done in the best interest of both the business and customer. It's an even bigger leap for leaders to trust teams will fulfill all requirements on time and on budget. Finally, it's an enormous leap for leaders to trust teams may know better than them. Servant Leadership may be the answer.

As an agile coach and practitioner, Glenn will bring a pragmatic and experiential path forward towards the development of servant leaders.
